Things Fall Apart Summary and Analysis of Chapters 6-10

Chapter 6

Summary

A huge crowd gathers to watch the wrestling matches. Ekwefi finds herself next to Chielo, a widow with two children. Chielo is quite an ordinary woman in ordinary life. But she occupies a position of great power in the village: she is also the priestess of Agbala, the Oracle of the Hills and the Caves. She is considered a different person when the spirit of the goddess enters her. Chielo is very fond of Enzima. She often gives the girl sweets. The two women talk, and we infer that Ekwefi has had many children, and that many of them have died. Enzima is now ten years old. Ekwefi prays that she stays, her children's deaths have been cause of great sadness for her.

The matches are exciting, and the great wrestlers all of have their fans. As the main event of the evening, Ikemefuna and Okada, the two greatest wrestlers of Umuofia, square off in a fierce bout. Okada wins, and is carried home on the shoulders of his enthusiastic supporters, while the young woman sang songs of praise.

Analysis

We learn the greatest cause of Ekwefi's sadness, which was only hinted at in the last chapter. From her conversations with Chielo, we learn that she has had children other than Enzima, but that they have died. In Chielo, we see an example of a powerful woman among the Igbo. Her orders supersede even those of the council of men, no great decision is made without her. Yet the two women discuss Okonkwo's recent attack against Ekwefi. Even as we see examples of women in power, we are reminded that Igbo women are vulnerable to their husbands' rage.

The wrestling matches are more of Achebe's documentation of Igbo life. From the large amount of exposition and commentary, it is clear that Things Fall Apart is not a book meant for Igbo readers. In fact, Achebe seems to assume that the reader has little or no knowledge of Igbo culture. We see the joy of festival time, and the excitement of the Igbo New Year. Achebe wants us to appreciate the beauty and strength of the Igbo people, sympathy and respect for the Igbo makes the end of the novel all the more painful.

Chapter 7

Summary

Three years pass, and Ikemefuna matures into an adolescent in Okonkwo's household. Ikemefuna and Nwoye are as inseparable as ever, and because Ikemefuna treats Nwoye with respect, Nwoye is developing into a more confident and hard-working young man. Okonkwo is pleased by the change, and he knows it is due to Ikemefuna. He often eats with the two boys. (Typically, the men of the house eat separately in his central hut, or obi, while the women and children eat in their respective parts of the compound.) Nwoye seems to be pleasing his father more and more. To make him happy, he gumbles about women and pretends to scorn his mother's follies (although in truth he still loves them). Instead, he listens to Okonkwo's stories of war and violence.

The locusts come. They are not a threat to Umuofia's staple crops, as they come after harvest, during the cold lean season. First, a small swarm of locusts comes, and then a larger group arrives. Their coming fills the Igbo with joy, because the locusts come only once every seven years, and they are delicious to eat.

 - To explain how Ruth, a Moabitess, came to be an ancestor of David, and ultimately, the Messiah - cf. Ru 4:21-22; Mt 1:5-6

[While the book's brevity and beauty makes it easy to read in one sitting, we will let it serve as the basis for four sermons, one for each chapter. In chapter one, we learn of "Ruth's Noble Choice"...]

Jack sniffs the air to trace the child and proceeds out of the house and up the hill. Earlier that evening, the baby boy had maneuvered himself out of his crib, got down the stairs, and exited the house, moving hurriedly up the hill to the graveyard at the top. Were there themes present throughout the book? They assume Bod ran away and leave the room once more, locking it on their way out. One day Bod goes to visit the worldly explorer Alonso Jones, but he does not appear when Bod calls him out. The first ghost Bod sees that night is Mother Slaughter, who asks him to place flowers on her tombstone. Bod hears voices that pronounce themselves as the Sleer, claiming they protect the place for their master and guard its treasures: a brooch, a goblet, and a knife. Mr. Frost says that this room belonged to the child who escaped, pointing at the cradle. Bod acknowledges that he has spent most of his life in the world of the dead, but now it is time to be a part of the living. Bod tells Abanazer he found the brooch in a grave where there are other treasures but does not disclose which grave he found it in. Scarlett rushes out of the house, telling them that she needs to catch a bus. Scarlett and Bod ignore his death threats and Bod tells him that his attempts to scare them won't work. The ultimate goal is for the reader to know exactly what the book was about, even if he or she has never read it. When they exit the mausoleum, Scarlett and Bod find Scarlett's parents, along with a police officer, searching for her. The stranger escorts Jack from the graveyard and goes to find the ghosts who are discussing what to do with the child. Josiah Worthington, a ghost who was a wealthy politician in life, does not believe they should take the boy in. She sits down on a bench when she hears the voice of a man asking for her help holding down a sheet of paper so he can make a grave-rubbing. With the help of Nehemiah Trot, Bod lures Jack Ketch to Mr. Carstairs's grave. Owens assume he is the child's parent, but are surprised when a flickering figure appears, accompanied by two other figures, and tells them to protect their son. MORE FROM QUESTIONSANSWERED.NET A man named Jack, a mysterious and frightening figure, holds a bloody knife. Liza admits she is a witch and that she cursed the people who killed her. Mr. Owens tells Bod that Silas is looking for him. Because everyone is pressed for time, the need to look up the summary of this book or that one is sometimes a priority. When Jack Ketch approaches Bod, he crashes down into the grave. Liza Hempstock appears in the room with Bod. Bod shadows Scarlett up the hill to the graveyard and brings her through the gate. The music ends and a clock begins to chime. At the restaurant, Silas tells Bod that Miss Lupescu died in the Krakow battle, and Bod laments Miss Lupescu's passing. Apparently, this is the first time in 80 years that the winter blossoms have bloomed. Liza eavesdrops on Abanazer and watches him take out a black card with the name "Jack" on it. One day on her way home from school, Scarlett takes the wrong bus toward the Old Town. Start Reading and Take NotesAs soon as you have the book in hand, whether your teacher assigned it or you chose it yourself, you should grab a pen and notebook to keep with you at all times. The ghouls invite Bod to join them on an adventure to a place where Bod can have fun and eat the most amazing food. She informs Bod that this is the third time he has unknowingly been saved by night-gaunts. Bod claims himself as the Sleer's master and the Sleer coils itself around Jack Frost and takes him away. Bod also learns that the name of the ghouls' city is Ghülheim, and Bod thinks it's a dreadful and nightmarish place. Create an IntroductionOnce you finish the book, you should have a few pages of notes and a good understanding of what happened, who the main characters were and all of the important plot points. Owens discuss with Josiah Worthington what they should do with Bod since Silas, his guardian, is not around and they don't know when he will return. Bod pokes a hole in the bag to peer outside and make an escape plan. As he reaches for 33rd President of the United States and the Emperor of China. They cover him with their ghost-bodies so all Jack can see is a mist. Bod grows even more frustrated when Silas denies seeing the dance. Organize your points in order in paragraph form. One day, however, he gives advice to a fellow student, Paul Singh, about how to deal with two bullies: Nick Farthing and Maureen "Mo" Quilling. Back at the graveyard, Silas tells Bod that Liza came and told him about the trouble Bod was in. She laments never receiving a headstone for her grave and tells Bod her name: Liza Hempstock. Later, Silas tells Bod that they'll need to find other ways for Bod to interact with the living, such as going to the theater or football games. Bod attempts to slide through Alonso's grave, but bumps his head on the ground instead. What would you need to know to understand what the book was about? They name the child Nobody Owens and continue to discuss what to do with him well into the morning. As daybreak approaches, The Lady on the Grey appears, and all the graveyard folk recognize her as the one they encountered at their deaths. Abanazer let's Tom Hustings into the shop and explains that there is a group of people looking for a certain boy, whom Abanazer believes could be Bod. Bored with Abanazer and Tom's conversation, Liza returns to Bod, and finds him trying to Fade. When Bod asks Caius Pompeius if there were others before him in the graveyard, Caius tells him that there was someone before the Celts buried at the very top of the hill. One spring day, Bod and Scarlett decide to investigate the Frobisher's mausoleum where the oldest occupant of the graveyard is rumored to reside. She introduces herself as Liza Hempstock. Thackeray Porringer, who was buried with the book when he died at fourteen years old, rudely asks Bod for his book back. They both agree to keep this a secret from Scarlett's mother, Noona. Hearing music coming from the town, Bod squeezes past the gates and heads to the source. Therefore, a wide variety of sites are available containing them. The purpose of these websites and blogs is to present an informal setting for people to enjoy books without feeling the pressure of making a purchase. Bod is able to outsmart them by using his Fade and Fear tactics to scare them away. After his lesson, a hungry Bod climbs an apple tree that hangs over Potter's Field. Jack claims he has leads to follow, and thinks everything is connected to unspecified trouble they faced in San Francisco. Owens leaves Josiah's tomb and finds Bod, who is now fourteen years old. All rights reserved. Caius Pompeius, a two thousand-year-old Roman ghost, asks the mother and two other figures if they are buried in the graveyard. Try reading it out loud to yourself to see how it sounds when you hear it. Jack Frost finds Scarlett in the mausoleum and holds her at knife point. The ghouls hastily pack up camp and proceed on their journey to G h lheim. Bod apologizes to Silas and promises to not return to school. This is where you'll turn to your notes. Roderick Persson tells Bod to give Silas their regards, stating that they never meet any members of the Honour Guard. It is a potter's field where the poor, criminals, and a witch are buried. Miss Lupescu gives Bod strange food that he has difficulty eating and instructs him on the different kinds of beings: day-folk and night-folk, ghouls and mist-walkers, hulk hunters and the Hounds of Gods, and solitary types such as Silas. Scarlett notices him and the two reconnect. Before she leaves, she tells Bod that he is a very courageous boy and should explore the outside world sometime. CHAPTER THREE: The Hounds of God The narrator explains that in every graveyard, there is a grave called the ghoul-gate, which is usually cold, abandoned, and more unkempt than the other graves. When they kill someone, magical power is released. Caraway and asks her to dance. Silas goes to Nobody's old house and inspects the bodies of his dead family. Amabella, Portunia, and Roderick Persson—three ghosts from the nearby graveyard—congratulate Bod on his efforts, but suggest Dreamwalking or Visitation as the best way to get a point across. Upon hearing this, Bod proposes that he should go to school so he can be better prepared to face the man. The Lady on the Grey admonishes the ghosts to be charitable, which convinces them to keep Nobody and give him the Freedom of the Graveyard. Afterward, the Indigo Man disappears. Scarlett and Bod then hear something slithering around the room. Jack Frost is delighted to find all the necessary tools needed to perform a killing ritual: the brooch, the knife, an altar, and a chalice. Now, it's time to start writing the summary. Bod suggests they leave and guides Scarlett back upstairs. Try putting yourself in the reader of your summary's shoes. By the time Silas returns at the end of the month, Bod has warmed up to Miss Lupescu, and agrees that he'd like for her to come back next summer for more lessons. CHAPTER FOUR: The Witch's Headstone Eight-year-old Bod asks Silas why Miss Owens believes Potter's Field, the land in the far corner of the graveyard, is dangerous. Bod Fades and disappears immediately and locks the man named Jack in the room. Owens suggests that they give the boy the "Freedom of the Graveyard." The stranger, whose name is Silas, agrees. Owens, who always wanted to have a child of their own, decide to take the boy, even though he is living and they are dead. Bod asks Silas why Scarlett was afraid of him, and Silas says nothing. CHAPTER TWO: The New Friend Growing up in the graveyard, Nobody, who goes by Bod, learns that being given the Freedom of the Graveyard means having abilities that the living do not. Bod can see in the dark, hide himself from the world of the living, and can even learn, with practice, how to Fade, Slide, and Dreamwalk. Edit and ProofreadOnce you've finished, read over your summary a few times to make sure it makes sense. Remember, you're not rewriting the book entirely — just picking out the most important details and retelling them in your voice. Be straightforward about the title and author of the book and give a general idea in a sentence or two of what it's about. Even though Bod goes to school with the living, he's not excused from his lessons with the dead. The ghosts of the graveyard help Bod deal with all the men named Jack as they pursue Bod in the cemetery. Bod wakes up early the following day and follows a strange scent to discover three men and a woman, all living, picking white blossoms. They practice the alphabet by copying names from the tombstones. After a particularly tiring night, Bod sits in History class, and feels Nick Farthing stab his hand with a pencil. Anytime you read a chapter or two, you'll want to take notes about what you read. Bod asks Mrs. After his conversation with Nehemiah, Bod heads down to his favorite bench, where Scarlett is sitting. Bod tells Nehemiah that he doesn't think Scarlett is his true love; he just wants to speak to her. There is an apple tree near the Sleer, but before heading home stops by Potter's Field first. Bod attends school without being noticed or recognized. Bod realizes that the students at school have begun to notice him, so when he tells Silas about what has been going on, Silas forbids Bod from returning. The other two (Jack Tar and Jack Dandy) stay at the house to confront Jack, who we now know is named Jack Frost. To keep Scarlett safe, Bod hides her in the Frobisher Mausoleum. Later, Mo corners him in the hallway and says she's not scared of Bod, despite what he did at the graveyard. For example, if you read "Come with the Wind," you may start with something like "Set during the Civil War, Gone with the Wind by Margaret Mitchell is an epic novel that tells the story of a young Southern woman in Georgia, her love affairs and her attempts to save her family plantation while the South burns down around here." CHAPTER FIVE: Danse Macabre One winter morning, Bod notices the residents of the graveyard acting strange. Bod can see in the dark, so he guides Scarlett as they go down and describes to her what he sees. Bod then returns to Liza who tells Bod what she would like on her headstone. Before leaving the graveyard, Bod borrows clothes from inside the gardener's hut so he can blend into the real world. Bod then goes to the apple tree by Potter's Field where he spots Liza and asks her to help him lure the Jacks to the ghoul-gate. Bod picks up a paperweight and says he could use it as a weapon, but Liza explains that Tom has entered the shop, so it will be harder to fight two men. Bod agrees and the gate below them is revealed to be a ghoul-gate. Two of the men who showed up at the Frost house (Jack Nimble and Jack Ketch) pursue Scarlett and Bod. Following his lesson with Mr. Pennyworth, Bod learns Grammar and Composition with Miss Letitia Borrows, where she also advises Bod against going to the unconsecrated land. For example, Liza grows distant and short-tempered with Bod, seemingly because she's still upset about the time Bod ran away from the graveyard. Bod is thrown into Victor Hugo's bag as they swiftly escape the night-gaunts. When Paul refuses to give his lunch money to Nick and Mo, Mo realizes that Bod was the one who convinced Paul to refuse to pay. After school, Nick and Mo follow Bod to the graveyard to teach him a lesson. Each of them died within a short time of her death of the plague. Bod notices the ghouls are acting less enthusiastic, especially after hearing a distant howling, when they are suddenly attacked by the night-gaunts. Bod says "Skagh! Thegh! Khavagah!" which opens the ghoul-gate, sucking Jack Dandy, Jack Tar, and Jack Nimble inside. Abanazer locks Bod in a room, telling him that he won't let him out until Bod tells him everything about where he found the brooch. Jack Dandy explains that the Jacks belong to an ancient, magical organization called different names, such as the Jacks of All Trades and the Knaves. For example, they may need a summary of Robert's rules or a simple summary of Macbeth to help them write a research paper, and a book summary website will help them achieve that goal. Not only do you want to check for spelling and grammar errors, but you'll want to make sure the description flows from point to point and makes sense. Bod doesn't know what she means.
